1. English Teaching: For young people or students, learning English to speak and write well means preparing for the future. But in most of the schools in Asia, English is taught by local teachers who may not be able to speak English. These schools are in need of native English speakers but can't afford to hire. Any English speakers are very much welcomed by the government schools, students and the communities .
2. Community Development: Our community development programs provide an opportunity of working with local communities and immersing in real local life. Each country has its own unique program e.g. building houses, and schools, renovate school playgrounds and infrastructure, installation of drinking water collection and supply, pond construction for raising fish for families etc. etc.
3. Child Care: Our volunteers assist children who are vulnerable of abuse and neglect, orphans, abandoned children, street children, and mentally and physically handicapped. As a volunteer you can also do day-care to ordinary children in the communities with arts, crafts, sports etc.
